UPenn alumni pay to study justice system

Big money. Two alumni have donated $15 million for scholars to investigate justice system deficiencies.

The University of Pennsylvania was awarded a $15 million donation from two alumni to investigate the effectiveness of the U.S. criminal justice system, officials announced yesterday.

UPenn will use the gift to create the Quattrone Center for the Fair Administration of Justice, named after prominent banker Frank Quattrone and his wife, Denise Foderaro. Students will analyze discrepancies within the system and propose solutions.

Forensic practices, wrongful convictions and victim compensation are just a few of the possible topics of investigation.

The new center, which will be housed at UPenn's Law School, is funded by the Frank and Denise Quattrone Foundation. The program will begin this fall.

"It is our profound wish that this new center will serve as a world-class policy hub for researching and debating the system's most crucial problems, as well as in developing concrete, credible, evidence-based solutions to catalyze long-term structural improvements," Quattrone said in a statement.

Frank Quattrone, who leads investment bank Qatalyst Partners, graduated from the Wharton School in 1977.

Denise Foderaro, a research assistant for the National Registry of Exonerations, graduated from the School of Allied Medical Professions in 1978. Both are Philadelphia natives.

Trapped. Girl, 10, rides in dog cage in back of pickup truck

A 10-year-old girl was seen riding in a dog cage in the bed of a pickup truck Monday just outside Pittsburgh, the Pittsburgh Tribune-Review reported.

Motorists spied the girl around 7 p.m. riding on the Pennsylvania Turnpike in Millvale, Allegheny County.

The girl's parents — 29-year-old Abbey Carlson and 30-year-old Thomas Fishinger — face charges of endangering the welfare of a child.

The parents told police that the girl wanted to be with the dog, the newspaper reported. METRO

Charged. Man shot shielding girlfriend from her ex-husband

Michael Adams, 26, was charged for allegedly shooting his ex-wife's boyfriend in Delaware County on Monday, reports say.

The shooting occurred on White Avenue in Lower Chichester.

Police said that Justin Taylor, 28, got between Adams and Adams' ex-wife after Adams pulled out a gun.

Taylor reportedly was shot several times at close range while defending his girlfriend. The Delaware resident underwent surgery.

Several witnesses were able to disarm and detain Adams. METRO

Stack: Collect back taxes to raise money

Plan. Sen. Mike Stack said delinquent taxes can fund the school district.

Sen. Mike Stack, along with the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, proposed yesterday a five-bill piece of legislation that would allow the city to collect nearly $400 million in back property and business income and receipt taxes to help fund the budget shortfall of the city's school district.

Stack said not to detract from Mayor Michael Nutter's plan to increase taxes on cigarettes and liquor, but his proposal "has got a better chance of passing and being utilized."

Sen. Mike Stack / PROVIDED

"The delinquent tax issue has got the best shot at finding revenue at a moderately faster rate to actually get the money into the school district," Stack said.

Last week, Nutter introduced to City Council a plan that includes a $2 tax increase on cigarettes and a 5 percent tax increase on liquor-by-the-drink. Coupled with his own plan for improved tax collections, Nutter said the city can raise an additional $95 million for the school district, which faces a $300 million deficit.

Stack's bill would give the city legal authority to go after property and business owners who are delinquent on their taxes.

"We can collect hundreds of millions of dollars in taxes that are already owed and unpaid," he added.

Breach. Chinese hackers access major weapons systems

Chinese hackers have gained access to designs of more than two dozen major U.S. weapons systems, a U.S. report said, as Australian media said Chinese hackers had stolen the blueprints for Australia's new spy headquarters.

Citing a report prepared for the Defense Department by the Defense Science Board, the Washington Post said the compromised U.S. designs included those for combat aircraft and ships, as well as missile defenses.

Among the weapons listed in the report were the advanced Patriot missile system, the Navy's Aegis ballistic missile defense systems, the F/A-18 fighter jet, the V-22 Osprey, the Black Hawk helicopter and the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter. REUTERS

Obama, Christie reunite to promote NJ Shore recovery

President Obama and New Jersey Governor Chris Christie walk along the boardwalk in Point Pleasant, N. J., as they view rebuilding efforts following last year's Hurricane Sandy. / GETTY IMAGES

Best buds. The political odd couple joked and played games on the boardwalk during a tour of the area.

President Barack Obama and Chris Christie, New Jersey's Republican governor, strolled along the Jersey Shore boardwalk like old friends yesterday, a political odd couple just hanging out together.

The two men had a common purpose: promote the recovery of the Jersey Shore from the aftereffects of Sandy, a superstorm that hit in the final days of last year's presidential election campaign. Obama's well-received show of concern may have helped him win re-election.

So when it came time to throw a football through a hanging tire at the Touchdown Fever arcade game on the boardwalk in Point Pleasant, N.J., it was Christie who had a successful toss, an ungainly spiral that went through the tire, after Obama had tried and missed five times with his left-handed throw.

The two leaders, Obama tall and lanky and Christie mid-height and round, gave each other a celebratory high-five, and then Obama referenced Christie's re-election campaign.

"That's because he's running for office," Obama declared to throngs of tourists, who recorded it all on their smartphones as a light rain fell. Obama received the prize for Christie's performance — a stuffed bear. Then they worked the rope line. REUTERS

Cyber crime

US shuts shady fund transfer system

U.S. authorities said yesterday that they have shut down a Costa Rica-based money transfer company that allegedly provided a digital currency widely used around the world by cybercriminals.

In a statement, officials said authorities in Spain, Costa Rica and New York arrested five people on Friday. They also seized bank accounts and Internet domains associated with the company, Liberty Reserve.

The digital currency is a transferable unit that can be exchanged for cash.

Along with the five arrests, prosecutors filed charges against two more company employees who were still at large in Costa Rica.

According to an indictment filed in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, "Liberty Reserve has emerged as one of the principal means by which cybercriminals around the world distribute, store and launder the proceeds of their illegal activity."

The indictment said the company had more than 1 million users, including at least 200,000 in the United States. It also said that virtually all of its business was related to suspected criminal activity. REUTERS

The company processed about 12 million financial transactions per year.

Too few salespeople? There's an app for that

Digital world. Shops are using apps, rather than people, to provide a retail experience.

Shoppers walking into a clothing store in New York City's SoHo neighborhood should not be surprised if a smartphone app, rather than a salesperson, greets them at the door.

Some retailers in the United States are starting to communicate with shoppers via a smartphone app called Swirl. It uses in-store sensors to track their location in the shop to send them personalized offers and recommendations.

It's just one of the ways that brick-and-mortar shops are using apps to appeal to younger, more tech-savvy consumers.

Imagine an automated voice menu. Now imagine it up-selling.
EMILY ANNE EPSTEIN, METRO

"Retailers want to give consumers something that's value-added and does what an expert salesperson might do — for example, tell them, 'Here's some great new products,' or, 'Here's a special offer because we know you've been looking at handbags,'" said Hilmi Ozguc, CEO of Boston-based Swirl Networks, creator of the Swirl iPhone app.

Retailers in New York City and Boston are among the first to adopt the technology, which uses Bluetooth sensors placed on store walls and shelves to communicate with the Swirl app.

Although Swirl's use of sensors to detect shoppers in stores is among the first of its kind, several other apps provide deals or tips when entering a store. REUTERS

Trayvon Martin. No delay for murder trial in Zimmerman case

A Florida judge yesterday ruled out any further delay in next month's trial of George Zimmerman, the former neighborhood watch captain charged with second-degree murder for last year's killing of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin.

Circuit Court Judge Debra Nelson, who ruled against a string of defense motions during a two-hour hearing in Seminole County Criminal Court, rejected a defense request to delay the scheduled June 10 start of the trial.

The killing of Martin on Feb. 26, 2012, ignited protests across the country.

Much of the public outcry centered on race issues because police initially declined to arrest Zimmerman, who is white and Hispanic, on grounds that he killed the 17-year-old Martin in self-defense.

"The whole world is watching to see if everybody in America gets equal justice," Benjamin Crump, a lawyer representing Martin's parents, said after yesterday's hearing.

"Most Americans believe that if the shoe had been on the other foot, Trayvon Martin would have been arrested that night," Crump added, speaking in an interview on CNN's Headline News. REUTERS

Ex-guard: Bin Laden 'blew himself up' to defy the Navy SEALs

No capture for old men. He claims his boss did it to protect his secrets.

A former bodyguard is questioning the circumstances of Osama bin Laden's demise. / GETTY IMAGES

A former leader of the Egyptian Islamic Jihad who was once a personal guard of Osama bin Laden has denied that the head of al-Qaida was shot dead by U.S. Navy SEALs, claiming he blew himself up instead.

Nabeel Naeem Abdul Fattah said bin Laden blew himself up using an explosive belt when SEALs raided his villa in Pakistan in May 2011.

In an interview with the Dubai-based Gulf News, Fattah said: "Bin Laden and his men defended themselves. They fired shots at the helicopter that has carried the U.S. Special Forces unit. As the SEALs killed two of his guards and shot him in his thigh, he triggered his explosive belt."

Fattah claimed that the Americans later chopped up bin Laden's body before disposing of it to destroy forensic proof that he had blown himself up rather than being shot.

"Bin Laden's burial at sea story was fishy ... Barack Obama lied when he claimed that bin Laden was buried at sea." METRO

Abortion fight

Court won't hear Planned Parenthood funding case

In a victory for Planned Parenthood, the U.S. Supreme Court yesterday declined to consider whether the state of Indiana can prevent the nonprofit, which is the country's largest provider of abortions, from receiving federal Medicaid funding for any medical services it offers to low-income people.

Supporters of the law, which was blocked by an appeals court, had wanted to prohibit any government funding of Planned Parenthood's medical programs, such as cancer and HIV screenings, because the group also provides abortion services.

Medicaid is a federal health program for low-income people that is administered by the states. REUTERS

KARL-JOHAN PERSSON

The CEO of fashion retailer H&M speaks to Metro about skinny models, affordable clothing and Bangladeshi factory workers.

"OUR MODELS WERE TOO SKINNY."

Life is going swimmingly for Karl-Johan Persson, H&M's young, handsome CEO: despite the global recession the cheap-chic chain is doing well. But the recent factory collapse in Bangladesh has put H&M in the spotlight, even though the retailer didn't use the factory. In an exclusive interview with Metro at H&M's headquarters in Stockholm, Persson proposes a new solution: a tag added to every piece of clothing that informs the customer if it was made in a safe factory.

Curriculum vitae

- Age and family. Persson is 38 years old and married, with two children.
- In the news. President & CEO of H&M since 2009.
- Family business. Stefan Persson [father] is chairman & main shareholder of H&M. Erling Persson [grandfather] founded H&M in 1947.

Last month a clothing factory collapsed and killed more than 1,000 workers. Now H&M, the biggest manufacturer of clothes in Bangladesh, has signed an agreement where you agree to help your Bangladeshi suppliers pay for safety measures. Are the factories safe now?

The factory collapse was horrific, but our code of conduct bans use of factories in residential areas, so this was not an H&M supplier. But we've been working to improve conditions in Bangladesh for a long time. You can never be 100 percent sure. Accidents happen in Sweden, too. We already have 100 full-time inspectors who travel around to our suppliers to make sure they adhere to our code of conduct when it comes to building safety, fire safety, wages, overtime pay and so on. The major change with the agreement is that we join up with other buyers, with trade unions and with the government.

But isn't the problem that people want cheap clothes? It never makes financial sense for a company to use better factories.

Yes, but it's a common misperception that cheap brands use certain manufacturers and expensive brands use others. We're one of 30 to 40 companies buying from many of our suppliers. There are apparel companies that charge their customers low prices, medium prices and high prices. The workers' pay is the same regardless of which company is buying.

Couldn't consumers play a role here? If clothes that are made in safe factories with decent wages had a special tag. I would know exactly what to buy.

That would be the very best. Then you'd remove many of these misperceptions that low store prices mean bad conditions for the factory workers or poor sustainability work.

Katy Perry and Robert Pattinson: BFFs

THE FRIENDS, IN 2010

It looks like Katy Perry might have been behind Robert Pattinson's decision to call it quits with Kristen Stewart, according to Life & Style. Perry, a pal of Pattinson's, reportedly told the "Twilight" star that he deserved better than Stewart after her affair with director Rupert Sanders came to light last summer. "Katy never really supported Rob's decision to get back with Kristen. She always said they wouldn't last," a source says. "Katy told Rob she didn't think their relationship could withstand the cheating scandal. And he deserved better than someone who would destroy a family [like Rupert's]." Since his breakup, Pattinson has been spotted out with Perry in New York and in Santa Barbara, Calif., where the pair hung out at a hotel and spied on a wedding rehearsal, according to People magazine. "They just sat together and watched," a source says. "They were not affiliated with the wedding party and were not seen mingling with guests."

No Alamo for 'Ye

Kanye West's bid to project his video for "New Slaves" on the Alamo in Texas turned out to be a losing battle when it turned out he had no permit for the spontaneous event, according to Mysanantonio.com. West announced his intentions to use the landmark on his website, prompting around 500 people, both fans and protesters, to turn up. But police got there first. A similar event in Houston was also shut down. "It's sad that people have such little respect for the Alamo," said a spokesman for the Texas General Land Office.

Kim's ex in a blender bender

Kris Humphries' mom did not take that blender, okay?

Just when the world thought that the most embarrassing thing to ever happen to Kris Humphries was his quickie sham of a marriage to and public spectacle of a divorce from Kim Kardashian, he went and started arguing with an ex-assistant about a blender. Said assistant, one Tracy Paradise, is suing Humphries (dude can't catch a break) for withholding money he owes her. Also, she says his mom went and jacked a Magic Bullet blender from her. Kris says his mom wouldn't do that, and is making sort of a fuss about it.

Kris, kindly buy your mom her own kitchen stuff, K?

Ed Swidey and Steve Wright face off in "Uncle Tom's Cabin: An Unfortunate History." / EGOPO CLASSIC THEATER

Seduction onstage in 'Venus in Fur'

Theater. The play tells the tale of a director's obsession with his leading lady.

Philadelphia Theater Company is putting on a play within a play, based on an 1870 novel. Oh, and it's an erotic novel by Leopold von Sacher-Masoch, the namesake of "masochism."

"Venus in Fur," written by David Ives and opening tonight at the Suzanne Roberts Theatre, tells the tale of a director casting a theatrical adaptation of Sacher-Masoch's scandalous book. All of the action takes place between the director and his potential leading lady, a brassy actress vying for the role of seductress — and S&M connoisseur — Vanda.

The director becomes obsessed with the actress, and the pair soon venture into their own S&M-fueled relationship

Step outside the play for a moment: The real-life director, Kip Fagan, says there is no danger of life imitating art in this case. Though while S&M is not his cup of tea, Fagan says he is familiar with the dominatrix scene. A former roommate was into it.

"My roommate received a spanking for his birthday as a gift. He was lying naked on a rack and a woman naked except for a mask was whipping him in a dungeon at his birthday party," Fagan divulges.

He found that "Venus in Fur" was a challenge to direct, but it was not the sexy subject matter that intimidated him.

Quoted

"When I was 17 years old, all of my friends started reading it because of Velvet Underground's song, 'Venus in Furs.' They loved the book. I could not get through it."

Kip Fagan, director of "Venus in Fur"

Theater. EgoPo shakes up history with its take on a classic.

The edgy EgoPo theater company is revisiting a classic with "Uncle Tom's Cabin: An Unfortunate History." Director Lane Savadove hopes the audience leaves the play with a new take on Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel — and on the character of Uncle Tom.

"The judgment about the novel came mostly from the vaudeville performances of the book," says Savadove. "Minstrel versions started to appear and white actors played the part of black characters in black face and the story became racially regressive."

The phrase "Uncle Tom" evolved into a slur for a person — especially someone black — who's overly subservient and submissive.

"To be an 'Uncle Tom' is somebody who acts how the white man wants him to act," Savadore says. "That makes sense in the vaudeville performances, but that did not come from the novel. He is a Christian martyr. He stands up to the most evil man in the novel and he is willing to give his life and does give his life for his ideals and his values."

"Any idea that Uncle Tom is weak is not true," he adds.

Due to its numerous stagings during the vaudeville era of the late 1800s and early 1900s, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is the most performed work of American theater, according to Savadove. The novel itself is credited with helping to end slavery.

"I went back and I read the original novel, which I had never read, and it was amazing — suddenly it was this fantastic piece of American literature," he says. "America had to change its very DNA for there to be racial harmony. Stowe was dreaming of a fully integrated post-racial society."

The EgoPo staging of "Uncle Tom's Cabin: An Unfortunate History" opens this week at Plays & Players Theatre, closing out a season of vaudeville-themed works. The production is cross-racially cast, with white actors playing slaves and black actors playing slave masters.

"We want to wake up history a little bit," Savadore says. CHRIS JORDAN

Mark Alhadeff and Jenni Putney talk dirty in the Philadelphia Theatre Company's production of "Venus in Fur." / GEORGE STREET PLAYHOUSE

"Power shifts, which are inherently dramatic, make for a great play. Sex has a lot to do with power, implicitly and explicitly," he says. "The real challenge was directing a two-man play when the actors are both onstage the entire time. If the characters go off the rails, a new character bringing new energy can't get the show back on track."

Last seen off-Broadway directing Vanessa Redgrave and Jesse Eisenberg in "The Revisionist," Fagan says he had an indifferent relationship with the book version of "Venus in Fur" until he read one particular review.

"When I was 17 years old, all of my friends started reading it because of Velvet Underground's song, 'Venus in Furs.' They loved the book. I could not get through it," he says. "When I was selected to direct the play, I knew I had to read the book. I wasn't able to find my way into the original novel until I read an essay that said, basically, that fantasy and reality aren't just intertwined — they are indistinguishable."

JORDANA BREWSTER

The "Fast & Furious 6" star talks about women kicking ass alongside the men.

JUST ONE OF THE GIRLS

The "Fast & Furious" movies may be dominated by men like Vin Diesel and Dwyane Johnson. But it makes room for badass women, too. The latest, "Fast & Furious 6," finds room for Michelle Rodriguez, Gina Carano, Gal Gadot and Jordana Brewster to throw down some punches. The latter plays sister to Diesel's Dominic Toretto and wife of Paul Walker's Brian O'Connor. Brewster also does time on the reboot of "Dallas."

The girls do as much fighting as the guys here. Are you a little envious that you didn't get a few more fight scenes?
A little bit. That was a sacrifice. … I love what the baby brings into the mix. I love that it shows [Diesel's character] Dom's very sweet, vulnerable side. The fact that he has a new nephew shows the new dynamic in Mia and Brian's relationship but I didn't get to kick ass like Gal [Gadot], Michelle [Rodriguez] and Gina [Carano].

Have you ever been in a proper fight?
A girl slapped me once. I went to an all-girls school in New York and a girl slapped me in the dark room — I was developing pictures — and she slapped me and I slapped her back. It was a bitch slapping.

The girls in the movie are quite adept at manipulating the male characters. When have you used your feminine charms to get your own way?
I only pull it out for special occasions. [Laughs] Um, I would say if I'm trying to get out of a ticket, or if I'm trying to get on a plane at very short notice. I flirt, and you know compliments help a lot. I find that disarms people.

You couldn't drive prior to the "Fast & Furious" movies. I take it that you're not into cars — what kind of car do you drive?
Well, I don't know much about cars. I love my car. I love the car I drive, a Range Rover Sport. I love it — and I love speeding.

Clearly there's going to be a "Fast & Furious 7." What can you tell us about it?
Well, nothing is settled at the moment. I'd like it to be stripped-down a bit more and I'd like go back to our roots and go back to L.A. I think that would be really fun and explore what the characters are like on their own turf.

Q&A

So to speak

Guys that drive souped-up, flashy cars look a bit ridiculous. Do you think that they're trying to compensate for something?
I think they can be for some men. … And you usually know when you see it. The car that's the loudest and the flashiest will have a douchebag behind the wheel. Yeah, it's like jewelry or the bag you're wearing. You shouldn't have to show off too much through something material.

GRETA GERWIG

"Frances Ha" star and co-writer talks about the death of youth.

GROWING PAINS

Time is something that has always been on Greta Gerwig's mind. Her new film, "Frances Ha" — in which she stars and also co-wrote with director Noah Baumbach — deals intimately with the growing pains that hit around age 27, both in terms of friendships and relationships as well as career. And if there's one lesson Gerwig has learned — and continues to re-learn — it's that you have to stop comparing yourself to others.

This movie deals a lot with what some people might call suspended adolescence.
Regardless of whether you have suspended adolescence or not, I think there is a passage out of youth that happens around 27 or 28. I was really interested in that. I'm not that interested in youth, I'm interested in the death of youth. [Laughs] But I always felt that way, even when I was 21 or 22. I was always kind of interested in the moment when you pass out of it. For some reason, those moments, I always felt them more deeply than I think anybody else does, and I always feel insecure still when I bring them up. I feel like I've always had a sense of fatality when it comes to passing through moments. I'm always aware of the moment passing, in some ways, and that kind of melancholy of enjoying something for the last time.

Quoted

"With, like, The Beatles, they had done everything and broken up by the time they were 29. They'd done all of The Beatles ... which is horrifying."
Gerwig

It's unfair to do an age and accomplishment comparison when it comes to musicians.
It's always the worst — unless you're Leonard Cohen. I mean, this is probably the neurotic in me, but I feel like it's good to choose something where the people who are best at it tend to be older than you. Because, I don't know, I want to write and direct, and I feel like you make all your best movies between 30 and 60. Pretty much every director is like that. So, I don't know, that gives me 30 years. [Laughs] You can't compare yourself to others age-wise because it's just, like, a losing thing to worry about. I don't know. One of the reasons that we made Frances a dancer — other than the fact that I love dance and I love dance on film — is that at 27 it's done. If you're not doing it, you're not going to do it.

This is a career with an expiration date.
Right. And there aren't many that have those expiration dates. So it felt like it was just an appropriate fit metaphorically for everything else that was going on, like with her friendship with Sophie. It's going to not be this way always.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

It's easy to get involved in the neighborhood

Living. Spruce Hill Community Association is giving out free memberships.

Sign up

If you're interested in joining a community association, but you're unsure which one you belong to, check out Plan Philly at www.planphilly.com. There you can search neighborhoods, find resources and get connected to the organization that represents your block.

The Spruce Hill Community Association covers a stretch of West Philly. / SHCA

Free is best, and the Spruce Hill Community Association knows that. Right now the SHCA is waiving the first-year fee for joining members. Normally the cost is $20 for an annual membership, but in hopes of building a larger community base, SHCA is giving away that first taste at no charge. So for West Philly residents living between 38th and 46th Streets and Market and Woodland, now is an excellent time to get involved.

Not entirely sure what a community association is, or what it does? Well, it's simple, really. Each Philadelphia neighborhood has its own version of a community association or development organization. The main purpose for these groups is to strengthen and improve the area. The organizations also work as a great way to connect residents and provide a voice for each neighborhood. And in the way that each block in Philly is unique, with its own issues and values, so are the community associations that represent them.

Neighborhood associations also help keep residents informed of what's happening in their own backyards. Recently, the SHCA held a meeting to discuss a proposed development project for a vacant lot at 43rd and Baltimore. With the SHCA helping to organize meetings like this one, developers are more likely to hear the concerns of the people.

It's not all town meetings and zoning codes, though, when it comes to community associations. The New Kensington Community Development Corporation, for example, outlined and executed the Frankford Avenue Arts Corridor Plan, which helped make Frankford Avenue the art scene we know it as today. Earlier this month, the South of South Neighborhood Association hosted Plaza Palooza, an afternoon of food, beer and live music. Similarly, SHCA put on its annual May Fair fundraiser in Clark Park — also with live music, food and family entertainment. That free yearlong membership is sounding pretty good right now.

The summer music festival makeup guide

Around this time of year, fashion stories telling you what to wear to summer's big outdoor music festivals are inescapable. But what about glittery eyeshadow that won't melt and tinted moisturizer that won't streak after hours of dancing in the sun? We sort you out. ROMINA McGUINNESS

MELTING LIPGLOSS

What the makeup artist says:

"It's all about creating a base that grips," explains LA-based makeup artist Melanie Inglessis, who has brushed up the likes of Lea Michele and Miley Cyrus. "For lipstick that lasts and doesn't bleed, apply a light layer of concealer or powder to your lips before adding color. Or use a lip pencil that is the same color as your lipstick. Draw the entire lip and color it inside. The pencil is matte and creates a solid base. Avoid products that are moisturizing and contain emollients, such as lip balm, which will slide off your skin."

RUNNY EYE MAKEUP

What the makeup artist says:

"Glitter may be a summer festival must, but don't use it on your eyelids. It's a loose particle, so you'd need a creamy base to press the glitter on. And keep away from creamy eye shadow, which will smudge," warns Inglessis. She recommends a matte eye shadow or waterproof mascara. Another trick is to dab some concealer under the eyes: "The more your skin is bare, the more oil it has. The concealer will keep things in place," she adds.

Estee Lauder

Double Wear Stay-in-Place Eye Pencil in Onyx, $21, www.esteelauder.com

L'Oreal Paris

Infallible 24-Hour Eye Shadow in Eternal Sunshine, $7.95, www.lorealparisusa.com

Cover Girl

Lash Blast 24-Hour Mascara, $9, www.covergirl.com

STREAKY FOUNDATION

What the makeup artist says:

"Rule No. 1: use the right foundation for your skin type. If you have oily skin, don't go for a liquid foundation, but one that's powder based," says Inglessis. "A face primer will give you a good base. It absorbs excess oil and mattifies your skin, ensuring that makeup doesn't move. But if you sweat a lot, it may be best to not use anything other than a good SPF and a concealer or powder as [a] cover up."

PORTS-A-PLENTY

Boy meets game. Boy plays game. Game gets released for another system so boy can play game again, this time in a different format. These reissues, known in the gaming world as ports, have really picked up steam this generation. Here are a couple of "new" releases that might give you deja vu.

"Resident Evil" is now available on more than just Nintendo.
CAPCOM

'Donkey Kong Country Returns 3D'

System: Nintendo 3DS
Company: Nintendo

It used to be that portable systems were the severely less powered cousins of home consoles. This is starting to change, with both the Vita and 3DS getting eerily close to home console horsepower. Case in point? "Donkey Kong Country Returns 3D" is a near-flawless port of a Wii game from just two years ago.

The game is your average Nintendo sidescroller, meaning it is brilliant. You control the infamous gorilla and his adorable sidekick, Diddy Kong, as they stomp on enemies, avoid obstacles and collect lots of trinkets. It's just as good as it was on the Wii, except now you can play on the toilet. Beware, however, this game can get brutally difficult.

Sidescroller

LAWRENCE BONK
LAWRENCE.BONK @ METRO.US

'Resident Evil: Revelations'

System: Xbox 360 / PS3 / Wii U
Company: Capcom

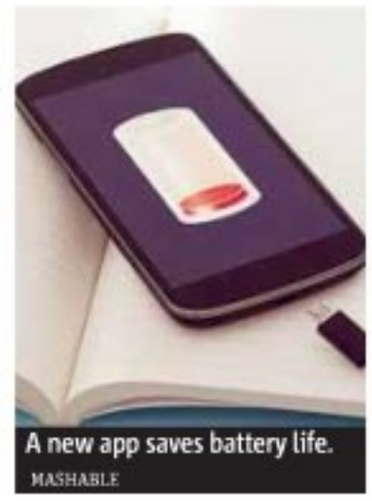
"Donkey Kong" went from a home console to a portable, so it's only natural we also look at an example of the reverse. "Resident Evil: Revelations" was released to critical acclaim last year for Nintendo's 3DS. It was lauded for bringing actual scares back to the "Resident Evil" franchise. Now it's back, on every major home console, to terrify your living rooms.

The game still offers up what you loved about early entries in the franchise. Ammo is scarce, corridors are tight and ooze monster zombie thingies lurk around every corner. The graphics do look a bit dated. Vistas that looked gorgeous on the 3DS look a bit off when blown up. Even with that, it's still an essential title for survival horror fans.

Cell phones. A brand new app improves Android battery life



A new app saves battery life.
MASHABLE

Battery life is always a huge concern with any smartphone. If you're not careful, you can wind up with quite a few applications running in the background, which drains battery.

Several smartphones now come with built-in software to optimize battery life. For those that don't, Qualcomm released Snapdragon BatteryGuru, an Android application that monitors what's going on behind the scenes on your phone, and adjusts your phone's settings to maximize battery life.

For instance, leaving on the Wi-Fi can drain battery power, as your phone is constantly searching for a Wi-Fi network for connection. BatteryGuru learns your most frequently used Wi-Fi hot spots, and then enables Wi-Fi when you're around.

Android apps often refresh more than necessary, which adversely effects battery life. BatteryGuru pays attention to app usage patterns, then refreshes your apps based on those patterns. This ensures apps are updated when you need them to be — but aren't draining the battery when you don't want them to.

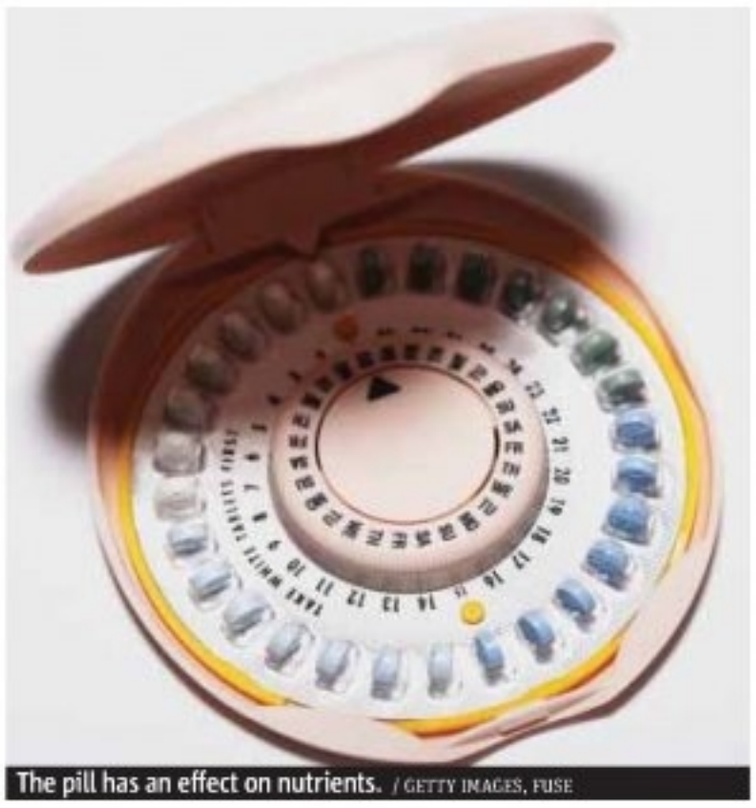
On the pill? Don't forget your diet

Health. Poor nutrition is at the heart of "The Pill Problem," Ross Pelton says.



The pill has an effect on nutrients. / GETTY IMAGES, FUSE

Ross Pelton, R.Ph., C.C.N., says that his career has bridged two worlds: that of a registered pharmacist dealing with medications, and that of a certified clinical nutritionist concerned with natural healing. This duality has led him to discover what he calls drug-induced nutrient depletion. This side effect of medications can't be measured in nausea, vomiting, headaches or whatever is on those unappealing lists. Rather, drug-induced nutrient depletion happens slowly, over time, as a medication either inhibits absorption or production — or leaches — nutrients from the body. Among the many common drugs that produce this are oral contraceptives, which prompted Pelton to write his new book, "The Pill Problem."

"As a class of drugs, oral contraceptives have an enormous effect on nutrients," said Pelton. "They deplete all B-vitamins, magnesium, selenium, zinc, tyrosine and coenzyme Q10. The only other medication that comes close to its effect on nutrients is steroids."

According to Pelton's book, without these nutrients, ailments such as depression, sexual malaise, lack of energy and insomnia can develop. To avoid this, Pelton recommends nutritional supplements to counteract the depletion.

"Even with a healthy diet, you can't get the therapeutic levels needed," he said. "I'm concerned with optimal health and the prevention of illness. Women who take oral contraceptives should take a high-potency multivitamin and multimineral supplement to provide adequate levels to prevent problems."

More help

Besides a good quality multivitamin and mineral supplement, Pelton recommends additional supplements, too:

- To counteract depression: "Folic acid helps," he said. "We now know that it should be taken in the form of l-methylfolate, the active form. Tyrosine, which is an amino acid, is also necessary. 5HTP and B6 are needed for serotonin production, which helps with mood. Lowered serotonin means lower melatonin, which causes sleeping problems, increasing depression."
- To counteract low energy: "The five nutrients needed are folic acid as l-methylfolate, B12, magnesium, coenzyme Q10 and selenium. Coenzyme Q10 slows down the aging process — aging is defined as a cessation of energy production. There's new understanding of how it minimizes free radical damage to cells in the mitochondria, which is involved in energy production."

Should you get on the kombucha train?

Tea. Everyone's drinking it these days. But maybe they shouldn't be.

Touted as a probiotic, a hepatic, a cancer cure, an acne remedy, an energy booster and a whole lot more, devotees claim kombucha, a fermented effervescent tea, is a miracle drink. Some, however, are unimpressed.

"There has been no clinical research done on kombucha that proves any health benefit whatsoever," said registered dietitian Robin Barrie Kaiden, M.S., R.D., C.D.N., C.S.S.D. "There are claims that it helps digestion [and] the liver, prevents cancer and improves the immune system, but there's no definite evidence, good or bad."

Jessica Childs founded Kombucha Brooklyn "after falling in love with the flavor and effects," she said. "A large number of people experience relief from stomach ailments as a result of drinking kombucha. Other effects that can be correlated with specific compounds in kombucha are a reduction in bad cholesterol, a limiting effect on blood sugar spikes and a calming of acne vulgaris."

But Kaiden remains unimpressed with such claims and warns that its acidity could have a detrimental effect. "Anyone with a sensitive stomach or colitis could be in trouble [drinking this]," said the nutrition counselor. And as for B-vitamins, Kaiden thinks it's a poor source.

"If you need B-vitamins, take a supplement," she said. "If you need a healthy drink, drink water."

Though Childs says that "kombucha is not a cure-all," she does agree: "The body is a complex system, and kombucha offers nutrients and support to that system."

KOMBUCHA "WILL NOT NECESSARILY CURE TWO PEOPLE OF THE SAME CONDITION," CHILDS TELLS METRO.

The skinny on kombucha

Kombucha contains yeasts and bacteria that produce natural acids after fermentation, including butyric acid, which is linked to preventing colon cancer; gluconic acid, which is thought to benefit anemia; lactic acid, which aids brain function; and oxalic acid, which is found naturally in rhubarb, but can be toxic in high concentration. This fall, Kombucha Brooklyn will publish "Kombucha. The Amazing, Cleansing, Healing, Energizing, and Detoxifying Effects of Probiotic Tea."

Three-dimension mammography praised

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: 13,856 women who received conventional 2-D mammography screening exams; 9,499 women who received Hologic 3-D mammography screening exam
Results: A new comparison study of 3-D mammography screening versus 2-D found a 38 percent drop in recall rates, a 35 percent increase in cancer detection rates, a 53 percent increase in the invasive cancer detection and an 11 percent drop in biopsy rates. The study was published in the "American Journal of Roentgenology."
Significance: 3-D mammography shows promise as a new way to detect breast cancer. Thorough initial screening reduces false positives, improves early detection and reduces repeat hospital visits for rescreening.

Two-dimensional mammograms may be a thing of the past. / FUSE

Possible roots of childhood asthma found

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Mice
Results: Researchers at Weill Cornell Medical College, Columbia University Medical Center and SUNY Downstate Medical Center claim to have found a cause for a common type of childhood asthma. Twenty to 30 percent of children with asthma have an overactive gene that halts the creation of sphingolipids, fat molecules that are part of the body's cell membranes.
Significance: The research is inconclusive on why the reduced production of sphingolipids prompted the asthma, but a link between lack of sphingolipids and bronchial hyperactivity, two significant characteristics of asthma, was detected.

Drinks linked to kidney stones

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Data
Results: A study published in the Clinical Journal of American Society of Nephrology reported on a possible link between people who drank one or more sugary drinks per day and the development of kidney stones.
Significance: According to the National Institute of Diabetes, Digestive, and Kidney Diseases, 300,000 people visit an emergency room for problems resulting from kidney stones each year in the U.S.

Prostate cancer care differs

Location of study: U.S.
Study subjects: Statistics
Results: A study in the journal Cancer Studies says that African-Americans experience on average a seven-day delay between diagnosis and treatment of prostate cancer compared with Caucasians. The study noted an increased mortality rate from prostate cancer in African-Americans.
Significance: A late diagnosis "can contribute to an increased rate of dying" in African-American patients, said study author Robert Chen of UNC Chapel Hill. LINDA CLARKE

A sneak peek at a brand-new brew

Beer. We taste-test Manneken-Penn, and get the scoop on that unusual label.

If a picture says a thousand words, then the label for Manneken-Penn says a million.

Before cracking the top on this beautiful Frankenstein of sudsy goodness, one is hard-pressed not to be drawn to the bottle art. The label tells the story every bit as much as the beer's hops, oats and molasses recipe.

It depicts a boozy Billy Penn statue sitting atop City Hall and relieving himself on the streets below, as empty beer bottles float among half-sunken skyscrapers.

"It's the perfect label, to be quite honest," said Weyerbacher head brewer Chris Wilson. "We've had a few [complaints], but not many. Someone always gets upset about something, but I think the voice of dissent will be overshadowed by those who think it's really funny."

Manneken-Penn is the unofficial collaborative brew of Philly Beer Week. The Belgo-American dubbel is from trendy Pennsylvania brewery Weyerbacher and famed Belgian brewery Brasserie de la Senne.

The journey from idea to bottle began back in mid-January when Philly Beer Week organizers held a contest at Field House to determine which local brewer and which lucky beer-loving raffle winner would head to Belgium to craft the brew. The pair — brewer Wilson and raffle winner Matt Hohorst — along with Tom Peters, the owner of Monk's Cafe, met up with Yvan De Baets, the head brewer at Brasserie de la Senne, and went to work. "It was more drinking than brewing," admitted Wilson.

The story behind the label goes that the four guys were sitting around one night in Belgium when a fist hit the table. De Baets presented the idea to a Belgian artist and Philly Beer Week's best-kept marketing secret was born.

The bottles will be unveiled at Philly Beer Week's Opening Tap on Friday. "Everything about the beer is Belgian except me," said Wilson.

That's not to say it doesn't have a strong Philadelphia component.

"Shoo-fly pie," said Wilson. "We added a bit of molasses, inspired by William Penn. The beer won't taste like pie, but it does have a bready, crusty character."

The details

- Ingredients. American hops, Belgian hops, molasses, oats, chocolate malt
- ABV. 7.5 percent (served in 11.2-ounce bottles)
- Our review. Delicious take on traditional Belgian dubbel. Nice, frothy head that settles almost immediately. Caramel color with sweet molasses aftertaste and very subtle spice. Thick, bready mouthfeel. Goes down easy.

This label's a pisser.

JIM KOCH

The Samuel Adams founder and craft beer trailblazer tells us what he loves about Philly.

CRAFTING A BEER

Jim Koch founded Samuel Adams back in 1984. It was a time before beer snobs and the craft beer movement — most people were focused on Budweiser and lighter beers. Koch, unknowingly at the time, blazed the trail when he brewed his first Sam Adams Boston Lager. Thirty years later, many credit him for starting the craft beer revolution. Koch, 64, took time out of his busy schedule to do a Q&A with Metro. He'll be in town next week to participate in a variety of Philly Beer Week events.

How did you get the idea for Sam Adams?
Well, the idea was pretty easy. I'm the sixth oldest son in a row to be a brewer. For me, not being a brewer would have been to break from 170 years of tradition. I knew how to make a great, flavorful beer. What I didn't know if anybody would drink it, or if I could make a living doing it, but I thought maybe America was ready for the opposite of what everybody else was drinking.

Do you take credit for starting the craft beer movement?
I'm one of the guys who started it, but, yeah, it's been a wild ride. I had no idea when I started Sam Adams that 30 years later it would basically change and create the whole craft brewing industry. In the beginning, it was kind of lonely, there were really only a handful of us and nobody really understood what we were trying to do. I certainly couldn't have it done it alone.

Did you think it would become a phenomenon?
No. I knew from my business plan that it would take five years for us to grow from 5,000 barrels and then we would level off. I thought Sam Adams and craft brewing would always be this little small cult thing. I did realize pretty quickly it was going to be bigger than that. I kind of felt like Adam looking at Eve, kind of looking at her get more and more pregnant and thinking, "Wow, how big is this going to get?"

You are a regular at Philly Beer Week. Why?
I've been coming since the beginning. Philly Beer Week has a legitimate claim at being the first major beer week. To me, it stands out because it does have some tradition. Beer drinkers in Philadelphia know about it and look forward to it. Bartenders and bar owners know about it, and they do cool things. I don't go to a lot of beer weeks. … I'm coming to this one.

You used to own the property where Nodding Head is, right?
Sam Adams was the first craft beer to show up back in the '80s and we were actually the first brewery

Meet Jim Koch

Jim Koch, the mastermind behind Sam Adams, is confirmed for three Philly Beer Week events on Thursday, June 6:

- 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Brunch with Jim Koch at Khyber Pass Pub in Old City. Koch will unveil his firkins, while chef Mark McKinney pairs them with brunch.
- 4-6 p.m. Tailgate with Jim Koch at Bishop's Collar in Fairmount. Grill and drink with Koch in the bar's parking lot.
- 8-10:30 p.m. Philly Beer Geek Finals at Field House in Center City. He'll be judging the two-hour competition, with prizes worth more than $2,000.

Quoted

"I had no idea when I started Sam Adams that 30 years later it would basically change and create the whole craft brewing industry."

Koch

to open in Philadelphia since Prohibition. We opened the first and only Sam Adams Brew Pub in the U.S. [where Nodding Head sits today].

Why did you place your Brew Pub in Philly?

It was one of the first markets outside of Boston to accept craft beer. In the early '80s, the seeds were planted for a good beer culture. You have great people there, like Tom Peters at Monk's Cafe; Dick Yuengling, always a pioneer, still is; and Dock Street. They went through the hard years trying to create a beer culture, and now we can all enjoy it.

You're not bashful about your love affair with Philadelphia. You even have a Sam Adams brewery about an hour away. Why?

Philadelphia has always been near and dear to my heart — and Sam Adams, the brewer and patriot, our namesake, he realized his dream of American independence there in Philadelphia with the Declaration of Independence.

Any new brews you'll be bringing with you next week?

We're bringing some firkins — a firkin is basically an ale that has just finished its fermentation, in the previous day or two. It still has living yeast in it. For Philly Beer Week we will bring some experimental beers and some we just do for fun, nothing significant for commercial release. It's a chance to showcase fun things for people who appreciate and are looking for interesting stuff.

You mentioned Dick Yuengling. Is there a rivalry there?

No, not at all. I'm one of Dick's biggest fans. I've known him for almost 30 years. What I love about him is he's just followed his own compass and has been unbelievably successful by doing that. We have this thing where because of the foreign ownership — 90 percent of American beer is made by two foreign-owned companies — Dick and I go back and forth between who is the largest American-owned brewery, which is comical because we are only about 1 percent of the market. I hope he's the largest this year, then he has to do all the media stuff.

With so many new craft breweries — about two new breweries open each day in the U.S. — how do you stay ahead of the curve?

I'm always looking for amazing things you can do with malt, hops and yeast. There are a lot of really cool beers that haven't been made yet, and I want to be one of the brewers that makes one of those cool beers.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Go out of your way to associate with friends who always stimulate your thinking. An active conversation might stir up several useful ideas.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Your thinking will be unusually sharp in a work-related matter. Your colleagues are likely to be impressed.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. If you have a good idea regarding a way to improve a sluggish relationship, put it in action.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Substantial progress in the workplace can be made through innovative thinking on your part.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. If you take the time to talk to a casual acquaintance, you'll discover that you share many interests. This could be the start of a close friendship.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. There is a strong chance that unusual circumstances will lead to an opportunity. There's something to gain if you hurry.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You won't find a better day to get involved in a social activity that has caught your interest.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan 20. The possibilities for making good purchases look better than usual, especially a large item that can be used by your entire household.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb 18. As it often does, the race will go to the swift today, so it behooves you to be both a self-starter and a go-getter.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. The chances of some financial gain are much better than you may realize. However, you must be able to recognize opportunity and work hard to use it.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Even though it might be a workday for you, if you can take some time off to participate in an activity with friends, try to do so.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Finally, accelerated progress is likely to occur in an endeavor that has been slow. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Look twice, shoot once

The recent collapse of a bridge in Washington is just another sign of more such disasters to come. Most of the blame falls on the lap of Congress members because they didn't put their differences aside and sign off on the president's infrastructure bill. Lesson to Congress: When you decide to shoot down a bill, make sure your foot isn't underneath.

Stop blaming America first

Re: 'Put bad practices out of fashion' (Metro, May 23) Leave it to letter writers such as R.B. Wilk to express their hatred of capitalism through false concern for the well-being of poor workers. People like that use condescending phrases like "typically American" when describing Metro readers who thought the front page on the Bangladesh factory tragedy was too much for American youth to see. In a global economy, not every country is going to have the living and working standards that we have here. Blaming American business is always the path of least resistance for those content to BAF ... blame America first.

Brown earns NL Player of Week honors

MLB. The struggling Phillies got some good news on a pair of outfielders before last night's game in Boston.

Brown leads the Phillies in homers. / GETTY IMAGES

Things seem to be falling apart fast for the Phillies.

There weren't too many positives to draw out of Monday night's 9-3 beatdown in Boston. And while it won't lessen the sting of that loss, one Phillie got some great news yesterday.

Domonic Brown has been named the National League Player of the Week. Brown was batting .348 with two doubles, one triple, two home runs and seven RBIs in six games ranging from May 20-26. He's the first Phillies position player to take the honor since Raul Ibanez in 2011.

Entering last night's game (too late for this edition), Brown led the Phils in homers (10), RBIs (29) and slugging percentage (.475). Skipper Charlie Manuel batted him sixth against the Red Sox.

The team also got some encouraging news about Ben Revere. The center fielder jammed his left shoulder into a metal fence at Fenway Park while making a highlight-reel catch on Monday. X-rays came back negative.

Barkley states case in OTAs

NFL. Rookie QB commanding respect of new teammates, coaching staff in spring practices.

Quite a few ears perked up when Matt Barkley boldly proclaimed he could come in as a rookie and compete for the Eagles' starting quarterback job.

Two weeks later, the kid from Southern California is only furthering his case.

Barkley, a fourth-round pick, continues to look like a seasoned vet in practice despite being buried behind Mike Vick and Nick Foles on the unofficial depth chart.

"There is a reason why he's started every game in high school and every game in college, because he was prepared for it," coach Chip Kelly said. "I think when you're around him, you understand that. It's not just he's so much more gifted than anybody else. It's really how hard he works at the game. [He's a] lot of fun to be around and lot of fun to coach."

Obviously Kelly thought highly of Barkley before drafting him. His Oregon teams played against Barkley's USC teams often in recent seasons. Early on, before any rookie camps or OTAs, the new Eagles coach declared the starting job would be an open competition.

"I'll get to know those guys," Barkley said on the first day of rookie camp, referring to Vick and Foles, "and I'm sure from what I've heard they are outstanding men, but you come in knowing that you have a job and they're trying to take that job as well, so it's competition, you know. Competing is what it's all about."

Kelly called yesterday's practice a big insertion day, as he tweaks the offense to his specifications.

He had members of his coaching staff wear makeshift fly swatters on their shoulders to simulate a pass rush.

Union struggles continue against East contenders

MLS. The soccer club, 1-4 against the Eastern Conference's elite, sets its sights on Toronto FC.

Sebastien Le Toux and the Union lost a tough one last weekend. / GETTY IMAGES

The Philadelphia Union haven't been able to crack the East's upper echelon.

Following last week's 5-3 loss to Montreal, the club has just one win (1-4 record) against teams in the playoff hunt.

The Union played Ocean City yesterday in the third round of the U.S. Open Cup before returning to league play against Toronto FC on Saturday. They are currently three points behind Houston. METRO

Soul to host open practice on Friday

The Philadelphia Soul are hosting a "Town Takeover" in Roxborough and Manayunk on Friday.

The city's AFL franchise will hold an open practice with fans from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on the grounds of Northern Children's Services on Righter Street.

Children will be allowed to run plays with Soul players.

"We would like to see all Soul fans come out and enjoy this opportunity to hang out with the team and have fun," Soul co-owner Ron Jaworski said.

The Soul (4-4) will host the Arizona Rattlers (8-1) at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Wells Fargo Center in an ArenaBowl rematch. METRO

Is your skin red around your forehead, cheeks, chin and nose? Do you also get red bumps similar to acne on your face?

If so, please contact us to learn more about our research study of an investigational study gel for adults with papulopustular rosacea.

Papulopustular rosacea is a type of rosacea marked by facial redness and acne-like bumps.

To qualify, you must:

- Be 18 years of age or older
- Have moderate or severe papulopustular rosacea
- Have a minimum of 8 papules or pustules on your face (acne-like bumps)

Qualified participants will receive study-related evaluations and study gel at no cost, and may receive compensation for their time and travel.

For more information, please call today to learn if you may be eligible. Medical insurance is not required for study participation. Study exams are conducted by board certified physicians at Paddington Testing Company.
